Narrator Pete Bradbury has appeared both on and off-Broadway and at leading regional theaters across the country in plays ranging from Shakespeare to Edward Albee. A former company member of the American Conservatory Theater in San Francisco, Bradbury received his training in their three-year advanced program. He is a graduate of Vassar College.

Author Kitty Sewell has been a psychotherapist and sculptor and has run an estate agency in northern Canada. Her first book, What Took You So Long, was a biography of a female-to-male transsexual. A Literary Guild Main Selection, Ice Trap is her first novel. Born in Sweden, Sewell is married to an English doctor. The pair split their time between Wales and Spain, where they operate a fruit plantation.

A finalist for both the Wales Book of the Year and the New Blood Dagger Award, Ice Trap is also a Literary Guild Main Selection. Hailed as “dark and intriguing” by Kirkus Reviews and “compulsively readable” by Publishers Weekly, it announces author Kitty Sewell as a riveting new talent.
After borching an operation, Welsh surgeon Dafydd Woodruff seeks temporary refuge in Moose Creek, a bleak community in the Canadian sub-Arctic. Many years later in Britain, with Moose Creek a distant memory, the delicate nature of Dafydd’s childless marriage is disrupted by shocking news from Canada. A 13-year-old and her twin brother claim Dafydd is their father—yet the doctor insists he never slept with the twins’ sadistic mother.
Returning to Moose Creek to sort through the mystery, Dafydd dredges up dark secrets and mistakes from the past that are more complex than he ever imagined—and that just might destroy whatever future he hopes to build.
